BRITISH RETAKE MINOR POINTS; FRENCH STUBBORNLY HOLD OUT

ENEMY BREAKS PLEDGE TO VATICAN TO OBSERVE PARTIAL TRUCE ON CORPUS CHRISTI DAY AND DROPS BOMBS

BRITISH HOSPITAL IS HUN TARGET

The battle continued vigorously today with the Germans centering their entire effort in a drive toward the Oise. This movement westward looks like an attempt to strike the Allies at Noyon on the southern sector of the Picardy front. The heights have been definitely consolidated along the Ailette River.

Rheims is obviously the principal important objective of the Germans. Their present strategy is a wide encircling movement to the southeast. Stiffening their front lines by large reserve forces and tenacious defense the British are strongly holding their positions. North and west of Rheims the Germans have taken a terrible hold. The enemy has launched a series of fresh attacks between Brouille and Jandry with the intention to break through at the Ardre River.

Fighting stubbornly the French have withdrawn from Epagny, 6 miles northwest of Soissons and from Blérancourt, 5 miles northwest of Epagny. In the center of the Soissons-Rheims line the Germans advanced slightly toward the arne. Again attacking on the right the British have retaken Thillers and on the left the French continue in possession of the west outskirts of Soissons. General Haig reported only minor activities in the north where the German offensive of last week came to a quick and costly finish.

With the British Army in France, May 31.—German aviators on Corpus Christi day again bombed a British hospital far behind the lines, killing women nurses, doctors and patients and setting fire to the building.

London, May 31.—After obtaining immunity for their own territory through the intercession of the Vatican, the Germans made the sacred holiday of the Corpus Christi a spectacle of ruthlessness. The Allies agreed not to bomb any towns in the war zone but the Boche continued their killing. The areas bombed consisted largely of hospitals with large and clear markings. American aviators anxiously awaited for the next day to avenge the attack.

After vain attempts to break through the Paris anti-aircraft defenses German aviators abandoned their raid on that city. The German long range guns later resumed their bombardment. A shell struck a church and another struck near a religious procession, killing and injuring many.

TODAY'S CASUALTIES HEAVIER

The American casualty list today contained 60 names, of which 15 were killed in action, 6 died from wounds, 11 killed in accidents, 4 deaths from disease, 15 severely wounded, 8 slightly wounded and 1 missing in action.

Frank J. Taylor, United Press staff correspondent with the Americans in Lorraine, reported that an American airman has established a record by making ten flights in one hour. Eddie Jekenbacker was the principal performer. Two Boche planes were brought down. One American plane was destroyed and the pilot captured.

Dispatches from London said that the British press and public were more optimistic today than at any time since Monday. There is no criticism of the French retirement from the Aisne front. The overwhelming numerical superiority of the German forces and the gallant cool headedness of the French defenders are appreciated here.

The decision of General Foch not to withdraw the bulk of the reserves from the north is commented upon with approval. To force such a move, it is pointed out, is one of the enemy's principal purposes in the present drive in the south. If Foch fell for such a plan the Aisne advance would be merely subsidiary. That reinforcements are hurrying to the Allies renewed the people's confidence today. The morale of the people remains unshaken despite the air raids and long range bombardment of Paris. The streets are thronged with people in gay attire, many of them wearing hats.

BUCKWHEATERS IN TROUBLE

Indiana county farmers created no little excitement at the court house corner during the band concert last evening and resulted in four young men almost getting behind the bars of the lockup.

Two Cherrytree fellows possessed a quart of liquor which they devoured in the rear of the temple of justice, being ably aided and abetted by local talent. When the last drop of "the ardent" had been wrung from the quart one of the "buckwheat cake experts" whaled the bottle up against the end of the building. The crash of the glass attracted the attention of the police. When the boys saw the police heading their way they broke and run, two going one direction and the others the opposite way.

Chief Eddie landed two of the runners while Officers Carlson and Bush got the other two. They were hustled to the lockup door but succeeded in convincing the officers they meant no harm but were simply complying with Indiana customs when they started the commotion.

The story freed them on their promise to never do it again.

A TALE OF THE EARLY THIRTIES

By Lew J. LaPorte

Away back in the early thirties, when this section of western Clearfield county was nothing more than a vast wilderness and the dense forest of trees abounded with wild animals and game of all kinds, such as bear, deer, panther and catamount (a close relative to the wild cat) being so numerous that on more than one occasion paths were trodden solid around more than one lone cabin in the snow in a single winter's night, by droves of hungry wolves as they circled round and round in search of food and according to a statement made to the writer by James B. Smith (deceased) who was born and reared in the timber woods along the banks of the Susquehanna on what is now the farm owned and occupied by Rev. S. C. Watts, near the Bloom bridge, in Pike township, and one and one half miles from Curwensville, it was very unsafe at times for children to wander very far away from the door.

His father, William Smith, settled on that piece of ground and erected a log house (still standing) and made a wheat clearing and sowed a turnip patch, and then brought his small and hardy family to the new home, where they resided for a number of years.

Mr. Smith also recounted to the writer that on arising on more than one morning from under snow covered blankets (the cracks between the logs being an inch or so wide) the children of the family would go out and run around these beaten paths made by the wolf pack during the night before, and the father on repainting to the rail and log barn to feed the stock would maybe find a calf or a sheep or a young pig missing.

Many a night the Smith family lying abed and awake heard the yip, yip, of a hungry pack of these animals as they roamed about the small clearing and around the house and barnyard. Going to and from the log school house in those days, on account of the numerous and viciousness of these forest denizens, was almost out of the question, unless the children were accompanied by the parent, always carrying with him his trusty rifle for protection. Even during school hours Mr. Smith said he had looked out through a crack in the building into the small clearing about the crude and unwhewn structure and counted more than a quarter of a hundred wolves prowling about and parading along the flanges of the forest. At noon time, while the children played close to the building and away from the forest line, the teacher always stood in the doorway, with gun in hand to protect his pupils from harm. When supplies ran short and it became necessary to replenish the larder the settlers traveled in groups to the nearest settlements, made the necessary purchases and returned home by twos and threes. That the younger generation of today may glimpse an idea of the dangers of pioneer life, we append the following incident, it being only one or many similar incidents that occurred in the early days in this section.

This incident occurred when Mr. Smith was about seven years of age, and made the settlers a little more wary in sending the younger members of their families very far away from home, and also take stronger measures to protect themselves when occasion demanded, or a trip had to be made on horse-back to the mill, and at this time the only one for miles around was located near Roaring Run, near where the brick yard is now located.

One of the original Caldwell's in this section, who had settled on the opposite side of the river and farther up from the Smiths, started from home one winter day with a bag of grain thrown across the back of an ox for the mill. The family were out of flour and had no bread in the house, and he needs must make the trip and return home as soon as possible. It was a cold, blustery winter day and the narrow trail through the forest was almost obliterated by the deep snow which had fallen and the only way to follow it and not go astray was to keep a sharp lookout for the blazes in the trees which marked the route, and it took the keen and quick eye of a pioneer to follow them successfully. Caldwell reached the mill in safety, traded his grain for flour and after "swapping" settlement news with the miller and some other settlers, who were there on the same errand as he, himself, was a little late in starting homeward.

Now, as a rule, an ox is a slow traveler and obedient to its driver, but Caldwell had not traveled homeward any distance from his starting point, until his animal showed signs of uneasiness and at times refused to go forward and then only under the free use of the goad stick. The settler was unarmed, not having even the large buck horn handle knife that he usually carried in a belt at his side when off on trips of this kind. As he entered a strip of dense timber, not far from the river fording called the "Devil's loop" his animal refused to go forward and seemed determined to whirl about and take the back trail. Caldwell could not account for the action of the animal until a faint howl coming from a distance and ahead of him, caused him to stop and listen. The sound came nearer, and was joined by what he thought must be hundreds of others. He knew the sound only too well, as also did the animal carrying the flour. He listened for a minute or so, and as the short, sharp yelps came nearer, he exclaimed: "Wolves by God!" and snatching the bag of meal from the animal's back, threw it over a limb of a tree, as high up as he could reach. He turned the animal in the direction in which he came, and hitting it three or four hard whacks along the side, shouted: "Run ye old devil, unless ye want to become food for the wolves," and run the lumbering animal did the best he knew how. That was the last that Caldwell ever saw of his ox.

Caldwell stood in the trail and peered along it, as far as the darkness would permit and soon he saw the outlines of the leader of the pack coming, ears thrown back, neck stretched out full length, tongue lolling and covered with saliva and froth, eyes shining as bright as the headlights on an auto and every jump a howl, which meant death to anything and everything in his path. He was followed closely by ten or twelve others, smaller in body and limb but not in ferociousness. Caldwell took to a tree and climbed far up into the branches near the top and found a seat in a crooked limb there to watch and wait. The wolves scented him ere they even reached the tree, a portion of the pack running on past, while the balance squatting on their haunches underneath set up an unearthly wail, that chilled the blood of the man in the tree. Caldwell was in a bad fix, his limbs soon became terribly cramped and his hands more numbed with cold to such an extent that he could hardly maintain his position on the limb. For several hours these wild and fierce denizens of the forest kept vigil, sending forth their barking and wailing at intervals.

The Caldwell family waiting in vain for their flour concluded something had gone amiss and becoming alarmed sent out word to some neighbor by settlers that they were afraid something had happened to their man and solicited aid for a search. Some half dozen men answered the appeal, and gathered at the Caldwell home, where unchaining the Caldwell huge dogs which he had tied up to keep them from following him to the mill, the party started on their search bearing lighted pitch pine torches. Crossing the river on the ice, the dogs soon struck the trail of the wolf pack and started along the trail, bounding a yelp with almost every jump.

The men were soon outdistanced, but followed the sound of the dogs as it came floating to their ears on the crisp night air. The wolf pack, under the tree, pricking up their ears at a sound they had learned to fear, drew together in a huddled mass, and as the baying of the dogs drew nearer and nearer gave a last look into the tree branches at their victim who sank from a sight into the deep undergrowth. Caldwell, who had been a prisoner for more than four hours in his uncomfortable position, waited until his dogs came into view and under the tree and then he came down and stood rubbing his cramped legs and arms. He was almost frozen and when the search party reached him they lighted a fire and proceeded to thaw him out sufficiently so that he could make the home journey with comparative ease.

GAVE DELIGHTFUL CONCERT

The Clearfield Italian Band gave a delightful open air concert at the "Diamond" last evening which was listened to by many hundreds of spectators.

Prof. Sartorio is making a marvelous improvement in the band and the boys are deserving of every praise for their fine music and their liberality in dispensing it.

Great was rejoicing in the Caldwell home at the safe return of the husband and father, and as he recounted to them his experiences around the big open fire place all gave thanks to the Creator and Ruler of all things for his safe return to them.

This narrative is only one of the many experiences that the earlier pioneer and settler of this section passed through and under present conditions in this same section one wonders how it was possible that these hardy and God fearing men and women came through and lived to see the country grow into industry and thrift with towns to spring up where in their day the fierce wild animals held high carnival and sway.

The Nurses Training school of the Clearfield hospital will hold commencement exercises in the High School auditorium on Thursday evening, June 6 at 8:00 p. m. A class of seven young ladies who have completed the course in study and practical nursing will receive diplomas. Dr. Henderson of Philadelphia, Pa., will deliver the address to the graduates.

The High School chorus under the direction of Prof. Van Osten will furnish several musical numbers, and the diplomas will be presented by H. B. Powell, president of the Board of Directors.

No admission fee will be charged.

GAVE DELIGHTFUL CONCERT

The Clearfield Italian Band gave a delightful open air concert at the "Diamond" last evening which was listened to by many hundreds of spectators.

Prof. Sartorio is making a marvelous improvement in the band and the boys are deserving of every praise for their fine music and their liberality in dispensing it.

Great was rejoicing in the Caldwell home at the safe return of the husband and father, and as he recounted to them his experiences around the big open fire place all gave thanks to the Creator and Ruler of all things for his safe return to them.

This narrative is only one of the many experiences that the earlier pioneer and settler of this section passed through and under present conditions in this same section one wonders how it was possible that these hardy and God fearing men and women came through and lived to see the country grow into industry and thrift with towns to spring up where in their day the fierce wild animals held high carnival and sway.

SOLDIERS AT PRAYER

A wonderful and impressive sight was witnessed in Pittsburgh yesterday when over five thousand men in the uniform of the U. S. Army and Navy knelt in prayer on Liberty Avenue during a short halt in the parade. Not an audible sound was uttered. Each breathed a short prayer for the success of a righteous cause. Men by the thousands lined the sidewalks with heads bared while this silent prayer was being said.

THE KAISER AND SINGING

Clearfield people are taking a greater interest in music during the last six months than ever before. Churches are making a specialty of programs of worship by voice and instrument. Almost every church in our little city has its choir, orchestra or other musical organization which is always striving to win praise and credit by its talent and accomplishment. The musical desire of the people has spread in all directions. The firemen are working hard on their band proposition and it is sure to be a great success and a credit to the firemen and the city as well. The Italian Band never performed better than yesterday and the hastily organized band from the remnants of the Fifth Regiment Band and New York Central Band rendered beautiful music along the route of parade. Of course one cannot live in such surroundings without humming a tune and this humming of tunes gradually brought into being the thought of a male chorus, a marching body of men singing joyful marches. Great praise is being heard of this new organization which has come to stay and will be available without charge for all patriotic meetings in Clearfield. After a while their services will be offered to outlying towns for a minimum charge and expenses.

A singing nation can never be conquered. Kaiser Bill with his ruthless form of warfare believes in singing but the songs he loves to hear are the hymns of hate directed against those who fight against him. We can imagine we hear his cohorts singing a doleful march or anthem with not a smile on their faces, only a hateful grimace and every breath carrying vengeance and venom. How different is the American song. Always joyful, always rollicking and full of good wishes for all men, enemy or friend.

HAS TO SWALLOW IT

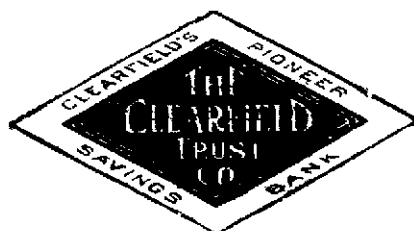

Last week the Democratic organ of this county was so non-plussed at the action of his fellow Democrats that its columns were so calm and mild that many of its readers thought its editor was down to Washington for another session in the holy of holies and that the city editor was in charge at the editorial desk. However, the editor was right on the job but still hopeful of some miracle counting out Judge Bonniwell as the candidate for governor. Nothing doing in that line though, so all this week the editorial pen has been laboriously used in rafting up an article which would put him in right with the "judge" and still not put too much of a crimp in his conscience and at the same time square with the sentiments expressed before the primary. This week The Republican comes out flat footed for Judge Bonniwell, jug and bottle included, but its entire argument is "he's just as good as Sprout". Nothing laudatory of the judge. Of course it would be impossible for The Republican to say very much for Bonniwell after the scorching that eminent gentleman received orally in The Republican office on the occasion of his visit here. At that time the editor of The Republican told the judge very plainly what he thought of him and called him everything but a Democrat. It must swallow very hard for Brother Short this year to have to take Judge Bonniwell, to say nothing of Savage, his age-old enemy, on one hand, with every Republican candidate pledged to the amendment, while poor Tobias, a dyed-in-the-wool and vociferous dry, must stand or fall with "Jug" Bonniwell.

TOBACCO RATIONS WILL CHEER HEARTS OF OUR MEN IN FRANCE

Paris, May 31.—The American soldiers at the Y. M. C. A. hotel, where they have received no more welcome news since his arrival in France than the recent announcement that tobacco rations will be issued forth the War Department will issue tobacco rations. The scarcity of tobacco, particularly the kind to which he has been accustomed, has been a real hardship for the American soldier ever since he arrived on this side and of late the situation has become so critical as to demand attention from the highest authorities.

An American soldier arriving from the front, mud-spattered and swaying with his impediments, was waylaid on a narrow street one night by a dozen American soldiers stationed in Paris. It was a terribly unfair attack, for, although the news of the attack had only been in the papers, the soldiers had only the faintest idea of what they were doing. They rushed him to the ground and made him lie face down.

Some French soldiers came up the street heard the noise of battle and ran to the rescue. But in the confusion of the moment, they joined the enemy ranks.

The soldier on leave, not being able to get even his hand free, and, as a result, finally found his voice.

"Say, what the devil do you fellows want?" he bellowed.

"Smokes—cigs—toba—cigs—cigs!" The last from the Frenchmen.

"Buy—but—but—"

"Well, you're coming from the front ain't ye? And that's the only place in France they've got any left!" the raiders exclaimed.

"What? Cigarette at the front? They're kidding you," the newcomer replied. "Why all we've got is this Boche stuff!"

And he rummaged himself, pulled out a tin box, and opened it.

In a second the twenty cigarettes it contained were gone, and so was the mob. With evident relief, the soldier threw his tin box on the sidewalk with a heavy bang, and kept on his way.

CLEARFIELD HONORS HER HERO DEAD

can war veterans, old veterans and their wives and widows in automobiles, was in charge of Chief Marshal J. Fred Weaver and the following corps of assistants, all Spanish American War Veterans, viz J. Ward Logan, Frank Book and Walter Welch.

The Liberty Male chorus under direction of Prof. H. Clark Thayer, of the Susquehanna College of Music, made its first appearance and was acclaimed on every side for the excellence of its appearance and fine singing. The chorus was composed of twenty-eight voices and they certainly captivated the crowd as they marched from the College of Music up Third to Market and thence to the band stand at the Court House square.

They opened the afternoon's exercises promptly at 1:30 o'clock. Their singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" elicited wildest applause and their every effort was greatly appreciated all along the line. Their program at the cemetery was very fine.

The parade marched down Market street to Fourth and across Reed to Second and thence up to the starting point where the veterans in their carriages were awaiting. The march was extended to the cemetery and when the head of the procession reached the entrance a halt was ordered, ranks opened and the automobiles driven through to the G. A. R. plot, where the remaining gray-haired old "boys in blue" gathered around the graves of their comrades.

Mayor Chase called the assemblage to order and after an overture by the Clearfield band introduced Rev. C. W. Snively, of the West Side Methodist church who offered up an eloquent prayer.

The Liberty Chorus followed with a patriotic selection.

Rev. J. C. Collins, pastor of the Eleventh Street Methodist church, and one of the most forceful orators in the Central Pennsylvania conference delivered the Memorial Day oration. Rev. Collins was at his very best and his oration was the peer of any similar discourse ever heard in this section.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Speech and President Wilson's proclamation were then read by Hon. Frank G. Harris. The Liberty Male chorus followed with another patriotic selection after which the military salute was fired by a squad of Spanish American War Veterans.

Benediction by Rev. B. J. Hummel ended the exercises and as the last notes of "Taps" sounded by Dr. F. D. Leopold, died out in the distance the assemblage dissolved and the thousands of people present turned away to visit throughout the silent city of the dead and then depart for their homes, filled anew with the patriotic spirit and the lesson of the memorial occasion.

The community Memorial Day services at the Fourth Ward school grounds was largely attended and highly impressive. A very creditable parade of all Fourth Ward people traversed the principal streets while the exercises at the school grounds were highly impressive. It was a most successful occasion.

They could not get tobacco. The blame cannot be laid on any individual or organization, but rather on all the unusual conditions caused by the long war.

One relieving feature has been the work of the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. in maintaining supplies. But these supplies came largely from the British and French and were not of the brands liked best by the Americans. So it was with extreme joy that the American soldiers learned that in future they will be able to get what they want through the commissary department of the army.

News of OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Curwensville had a worthy observance of Memorial Day with noon and afternoon exercises. An immense flag, 20 by 60 feet in size was hung to the breeze by the employees of the Penna Hide and Leather Company's plant with an appropriate program. At 10 a m the tannery employees headed by the McCloskey and Lihud drum corps paraded to the Borough Hall where they were joined by the Keystone Cornet Band. The augmented procession then marched to the tannery for the flag raising. Foreman W B Ammeier of the tannery presided and opened the program with an interesting recital of the history of the old flag being replaced and of its excellent successor. An invocation was made by Rev Joseph H Cooke. The flag was flung to the breeze to the accompaniment of the strains of the Star Spangled Banner played by the band. The address of the occasion was an outline of vivid patriotic oratory by Rev Philip A Lynch, of St Timothy's R C Church. Remarks were made by Rev Joseph H Cooke, who also read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Several greatly appreciated selections were rendered by the Keystone Band. It was a good attendance that enjoyed the excellent program thereby advancing the cause of patriotism and national honor.

Once more Curwensville had a fitting observance of Memorial Day with a patriotic parade and appropriate exercises. A patriotic parade included both town band, fraternal societies, flags of the Allies, Rescue Hook and Ladder Co., veterans, speaker and clergy, and other citizens. The customary memorial exercises were conducted by the veterans at the Soldiers Plot in Oak Hill cemetery. At the conclusion of the G A R exercises the following program was conducted: Selection—Crescent Band Invocation—Rev Bertram H Conley "Star Spangled Banner" Male Chorus and Ensemble Introduction of Speaker R D Swoope and Hon W I Swoope "America"

Male Chorus and Ensemble Benediction—Rev Joseph H Cooke The Keystone Band played at the G A R ceremonies and the Crescent Band at the speaker's stand, thus adding much to the program. So well known is our former town band, the orator of the occasion that no commendation is necessary other than to add that Hon W I Swoope spoke with his customary grace, ardor and promptness.

Nothing occurred to mar the exercises which were very successful wherefore the more creditable to the committee of arrangements that had a very limited time in which to prepare for the excellent observance. Ample time will be taken to arrange for an appropriate observance of Independence Day, July 4th, 1918.

Mrs A C Stey and daughter, Mary, of Salamanca N Y, are visiting relatives and friends in this place.

Those who enjoy the national game went to Athletic Park after the settlers at the cemetery and saw the Curwensville base ball team set up the Altoona team to the score of 8-0. WALLACETON

To open our letter we ask one and all to take that guilty conscience and give one day's work to the Red Cross, thereby helping one or more of our own young American boys who are at the front trying conclusions with the baby killing and punning and murderous tyrants of the war. We are over which this men have ruler runs rampant. Nothing is to great to sacrifice to save a life or help the wounded. With the transport through our city bearing drafted soldiers to the defense of the flag that has never known defeat. That stone heart beat within any loyal citizen without a tremor for the sake of the lady who are on the way preparatory to be sent to the front. The best soldiers of the world are the men who smile in the face of death. They pass you by and bid them farewell and then go home feeling that you let them suffer for financial and you have not given your part in the war. Hats off to them and all. Please at that old worn money bag and for your open the trunks and save the boys and Red Cross nurse an old time average.

COURT NOTES

The case of John A. Stock, Administrator of the estate of Michael Hunyadi against Mrs. Annie Koval, of Morrisdale, mention of which was made in The Progress when the suit was brought, failed to materialize when called for trial yesterday.

In this case the administrator alleged that Hunyadi had paid Mrs. Koval a $300 judgment twice and sued to recover the extra payment. The trial was set for yesterday morning, but when the names of the parties were called Administrator Stock and his attorneys failed to appear and a noli pro was entered by the Court on motion of Miller & Hartwick, Mrs. Koval's attorneys.

The defendant was very much put out over the institution of this suit and stated that she had loaned Hunyadi the $300 to purchase a piece of land; that he had finally returned the money, making restitution in two payments, the final one being several months preceding his death. She had her witnesses here to prove every feature of the transaction down to the books of the Moshannon bank at Philipsburg where the transactions were recorded.

Mrs. Koval is the well known court interpreter and has been connected with the Clearfield county courts for the past twenty-five years. Her reputation for integrity and honesty had never been questioned until in this action and she was greatly rejoiced over the utter discrediting of her enemy. As we carried the story when the suit was entered we felt it our duty to make this explanation in justice to Mrs. Koval.

here has informed us that the offerings to this fund has netted almost $700 and C. I. was untiring in his efforts to swell the amount for this cause and credit is also due to S. L. Roan, superintendent of the S. W. Ref. Co. clay mine. Lee worked for a day's work from each man and says the 70 or more men about the mines were 100 per cent. in their willingness to fire a shot at the Kaiser.

To the ladies of our berg is due a "Hats Off" for they realized a snug little sum by holding a festival and turning the entire proceeds over to the fund. We feel that this little place has done its bit and we stand to a man ready to continue in this work to give our boys a lift.

The Superintendent and office forces at the brick works came over the top with a god showing. We feel that with a hand full of people as a population that this amount is sure to be our quota.
